your of its existence, will be published as early as practicable after the close of the current year.

It will be compiled and printed at the Daily Press Office, as usual, from the best and most authentic sources, and no pains will be spared to make the work complete in all respects. . .

In addition to the usual varied and voluminous information, the value of the "Obronicle and Directory for 1871" will be further augmented by the addition of a Chromo-lithograph plate of the NEW CODE OF SIG-NALS in use at the Penk; also of the various HOUSE FLAGS; a MAP OF HONGKONG; A MAP OF JAPAN; and a CHART OF THE COAST besides other local information and statistics corrected to date of publication, tending to make this work the vade mocum for all Public, Mercantile and General Offices.

.The Publisher requests that those persons who have not yet returned the printed forms which have been sent to them to fill up, will be good enough to do so without delay. Any persons who have recently arrived, and to whom printed forms have flot been sent, are respectfully requested to forward their names and addresses as carly as possible for insertion.

REVIEW. Journey in North China, Manchuria, and Eastern Mongolia, by the Reverend A. WILLIAMSON, Il.A., Agent of the National Bible Society of Scotland .- London: Smith. Elder & Co.

(SECOND NOTICK.) After reviewing the various influences at present at work in China, as already noticed, China is, in theory, the most autocratic, and the Rev. Mr. Williamson proceeds to give some in practice, the most democratic country in valuable opinions upon the future prospects the world. of foreign relations with the country. He has no faith in the idea of an indefinite extension of treaty ports and Consulates in of the Hou. W. H. S. vard, and of Geo. F. China, but he is fully alive to the importance | Squard, Esq., U.S. Consul-general at Shanghai. of this vast country being opened up. His idea is that this can be accomplished by the introduction of Railways and the adoption of a system of passports. He says: --

"This would secure all that is necessary for the development of the country, divinte the necessity of minor agencies by large firms, and entail little or no expense on the part of foreign Governments. The railways would of course made a most extraordinary charge against a require to be managed at first and for long by Corporal in H.M. :9th Regiment of Madras foreigners; but that might be done by the Native Infantry, accusing him of attempting a creation of another service, such as the Imperial "do" in an exchange transaction for rupaes. This idea is probably in the main correct. witness to corroborate all, that he was disthat is in so far as it indicates that one great charged with flying colours. step towards the solution of a great part of the difficulties at present existing would be the introduction of improved means of intercommunication. But it is to be feared that the author unconsciously assumes the absence of the very difficulties which stand in the way not for stealing a bag of bamboo shoots from the only of the introduction of railways, steamer Kinshan. but of an extension of steam navigation, or even of the residence of foreigners for the transaction of business. But how to remove the dif- charged with having been drank and disorficulties actually existing it seems impossible being new coniers, and having partaken of some to say. The Rev. Mr. Williamson suggests that English merchants in the creation of another Service such as the inverse in Lordon for the creation of another Service such as the inverse in Lordon for the creation of another Service such as the inverse in Lordon for the creation of another Service such as the inverse in Lordon for the creation of another Service such as the inverse in Lordon for the creation of another Service such as the inverse in Lordon for the creation of another Service such as the inverse in Lordon for the creation of the creation of another Service such as the inverse in Lordon for the creation of the creatio the present weakened state of the government, this would be a task of much difficulty. Still the suggestion is worth considering,

"" I sympathize with the published op nicht of H. E. Sir Rutherford Alcock, H.M. Minister, that the Treaty should be revised impartially : that we should hear what the Chinese have to say, as well as our own countrymen; but I humbly think we ought never to lose sight of the speciality of the onse as regards the Chinese They are in a state of transition, or rather differentiation; new thoughts and new ideas, and new means of warfare, have got abroad among them, formenting and exciting their, minds. Year by year this ferment is increasing, and to arrest its course is as impossible as it is undesirable. The old paths will not now do; China can never again be governed in the old way. The country is too large, and foreign ideas have made far too great progress for that. Now channels must be provided for the new ideas: new menns must be adopted to meet the ordergency which has avison, else there will be confusion worse confounded. China is like a sick man under a course of medicine; baving put him in this condition, we must not leave him alone, far less trust him to his own devices, for that would prove his rain. We must take him in hand, point out the proper courses; and, as for as possible, induce him to follow them, until we have set him on his feet again in restored health and fresh vigour, qualified to start on a new and glorious career. I do not despair of the Chinese being able to rise again from their prostration, or eyen of the present Government being able to purify and re-organize the country; but now means must be adopted. In the present position of China nothing is so likely to do her real and permanent good as the introduction of railways. Moreover, it appears indispensable to the Government of the country. Unless there be some means provided of rapidly concentrating troops at any given point. I do not see how permanent peace and security can be established in this country. Steam or anarchy appears to me the only alternative now left to the Chinese people."

It is satisfactory to note that the conclu-sions which the Rev. Mr. Williamson draws of the British ship Kildonan, were charged by from his personal knowledge of the temper Michael Featherstone, P.C. 35, with having of the Chinese people is contrary to the ideas struck him when in plain clothes. and realized, it appears that the Prussians had to fight a stronger enemy than they supposed in the battles of August 16 and 18. The French, it is well known, lost about 50,000 men on those sanguinary days, the Prussians forcommand from 180,000 to 200,000 men-that is, a force but slightly inferior to the combined armies of Prince Frederick Charles and Steinmetz. The small superiority on the side of the Pruscians was more than counterbalanced by Bazaine's fighting in strong positions, and baving, moreover, the protection of the neighment, too, of Metz, by 210,000 men appears a bold undertaking when it is considered that the force invested was almost at large, and had some of the strongest citadels in the world to support its sorties. THE MONEY MARKET. (Pall Mall Ganette, October 22nd.) In order to avoid possible loss through miscalculation as to the future value of money and the plenty or scatcity of espital in this Market, it is desirable that as far as possible an accurate estimate abould be formed of the influences which are at work, and which will come into play as a result of the war. It would seemed that this unfortunate war is not likely materially to affect the value of maney, but, on the contrary, that a more than adequate supply and easy rates will continue. That money is more likely to become dearer than remain cheap appears to be supported by the following considerations:—First, the supply in this Market is known to consist largely of foreign capital, which must be withdrawn as time goes on, whether the war terminate soon or not. expenditure already-incurred on both sides is so much capital sunk by Prussia and France, and that the money markets of both countries are to such extent poorer. Neither is the money so spent nevely the same capital available for loans in other places, as is erroneously inferred. Thirdly, the system of hourding which is resorted to by all nations in troublons times is. a large extent in France, and if the war were to cease to-morrow, it would be a long amount of freight, for which, apply to time before these hidden reserves would be liberated, Fourthly, a tremendous loss will be tf 2220.
